INTRODUCING...

We are thrilled to unveil the work of Valerie Winterholler!

Valerie's quiet abstract paintings are often influenced by the scenic beauty of the high mountain ranges and desert landscapes that surround her. "When I paint, I am taking a journey, but I hope to leave behind a map of what has been discovered and perhaps inspire others. I strive to create imagery that will invite people to take a deep breath, and let down their guard. My work is the record of my experiences, and the mark of my place in the world." ~ Valerie

SOMEWHERE OFF THE BEATEN PATH

---

Highland Blossoms, Buckland| Oil 24 x 36 in.

This exhilarating scene of the blossoming trees along the road from South Deerfield to Buckland, Massachusetts, is one that represents miles of newly graded country roads, that we still enjoy today all across the United States.

One hundred years ago, America's first road trip kicked off a national pastime: touring together through the landscape by car.

This new way of seeing the world was made especially exhilarating in an open top automobile.

Here, James Scoppettone takes you to a favorite 'beautiful spot,' where the road had been intentionally cut for drivers and their passengers to appreciate the natural assets of the land.

"Royal families throughout history have revered citrine, believing that it held the power of the sun. These are the things I contemplated while creating this unique piece.

When I create bears I focus on their human qualities and the joy that happens when they interact. The charming antics of a mother and cub radiate elegant yet light hearted theater to all those you may share it with." ~ Lyle Sopol

THE ART OF CHANGE

A LETTER FROM THE ELWOODS

---

Mike and Christine Elwood have been longtime collectors of Lahaina Galleries. We've asked them to share how they support the arts in their local community.

---

“2020 has been a year like no other. The life we all knew just 10 short months ago, sometimes feels like a distant memory. Yes, many things have changed -- accompanied by some real disappointment -- but not all is bad. For most of us, we have been compelled to think and act differently. We have had to reimagine things we once took for granted. Our perspectives on life and the ways in which we relate to the world are evolving. In my humble opinion, I believe this time of change will eventually become a long-term positive, and I see a very real opportunity for the world of Art to play an increasingly important role in that evolution. Speaking only on behalf of our small mid-west community, that's going on where we live and I wanted to share.”
